

EKG - Electrocardiogram

An electrocardiogram is a graphic display of the electrical activity of the heart from electrodes placed on the skin in specific locations. The electrical activity created by the patient's heart is processed by the EKG machine and then printed on special graph paper which is later interpreted by a physician.

This is a painless process that requires no preparation and takes approximately 10-15 minutes to perform.

